Marine propulsion is the mechanism or system used to generate thrust to move a ship or boat across water. While paddles and sails are still used on some smaller boats, most modern ships are propelled by mechanical systems consisting a motor or engine turning a propeller, or less frequently, in jet drives, an impeller. Marine engineering is the discipline concerned with the design of marine ...

A radio frequency (RF) resonant cavity thruster, also known as an EmDrive, is a hypothesized type of propellant-free thruster that was proposed in 2001 by Roger Shawyer. No plausible theory of operation for such drives has been proposed; the theories that were proposed were shown to be inconsistent with known laws of physics, including conservation of momentum and conservation of energy.
