Featuring approximately 20,000 objects in all media, the Yale University Art Gallery's collection of American decorative arts is among the finest in the United States. Its particular strengths are in the colonial and early Federal periods, due in large part to generous gifts from Francis P. Garvan, B.A. 1897. Yale's collection of early silver is noted for superior examples from New England, New York, and Philadelphia.

"A quiet collection of very fine poems. Song has filled her first book with sensuous, delicate poetry, lines to be read alone on rainy days. Picture Bride is divided into five parts, each part named for a flower. The poems themselves are blossoms too, as they spring fresh from the page, shyly triumphant.
